

Faction arises from the unequal distribution of property among citizens.

A republic refines public views by passing them through elected representatives.

Ambition must be made to counteract ambition so that power checks power.